

Update: 12.03.21

Well aren't children amazing! As the classrooms are filled once again with chatter and laughter you really would think that the children had never been away. The staff have all been pleasantly surprised at the standard of work produced as well as the behaviour and attitude of the children this week. That is huge testament to you, the staff and of course the children. As well as assessing for any gaps in learning to support and re-teach, the teachers are really concentrating on the children's happiness in school as they re-build friendships and get into the swing of things. I think everyone is enjoying some 'normality' again 😊

I don't really like the term 'catch-up' but I would like to reassure you that plans are in place to support the children who require it. Many children will have coped very well with remote learning and will be on track, some will have even benefitted from the completing the work with 1:1 support. Many will be back on track quickly once they return to the classroom and for some it will take a little bit longer. I think we also need to recognise the positive experiences many of our children have had over lockdown especially the special family time many of them are talking about and the fun they've had with you. Children certainly are a whole lot more resilient than we often give them credit for.

Keeping Safe

I have had notification that several primary aged children are playing on and around the railway lines. Obviously, I hope it's no one from our school but a talk to your own child about the dangers would be very beneficial. Thank you.

Have a lovely weekend,
